

‘Where there’s smoke, there’s fire’

Reportage Photo

Zoe Smith

Caption:

This picture shows how common litter is on beaches. I was walking along the beach with my camera and I found a cigarette that had been dropped on the ground. The sustainable development goal that this relates to is goal 14, life below water. If cigarettes and other bits of rubbish are being dropped on the beach, when the tide comes up the rubbish will be washed away, and it will harm the animals of New Zealand that live underwater. We as a country need to stand together and care for our beaches.